

A CONTEST OVER GERMAN SPEAKER

VALIDITY OF SPEAKER OF PARLIAMENT ELECTION QUESTIONS.

GERMAN PIPE IS PASSING

Cigarettes Are Taking Place of the Pipe in the German Empire Now.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—The German Imperial Parliament has made a record in the selection of a Speaker this year by having four contests for the position.

The third speaker this season, Dr. Johannes Kaempf, has resigned his seat on account of doubt cast on the validity of his election.

Dr. Kaempf was elected as a Radi-

And His Stomach Is All Right

Thousands With Poor Teeth Have Good Digestion By Using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Meals.

Whether or not we eat too much, is a matter for individual judgment. Benjamin Franklin tried the experiment of living on a handful of raisins. But he discovered that the question wasn't what he ate nor the quantity thereof, but one of digestion and assimilation. The normal person eats heartily, and with keen enjoyment. That is because his mind doesn't anticipate stomach trouble. And if he does have an attack of sour stomach or indigestion he knows that the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give quick relief.

A Gentleman of the 'Old School' Who Keeps Up With the Times.

Many people have poor teeth, weak gums, sore teeth and other bothersome troubles that prevent a vigorous mastication of food. And instead of eating soft, mastic food that falls on the appetite they go in for those savory dishes, the very odor of which starts the saliva and makes the stomach fairly rebel with anticipation.

This is but a natural condition. Anything else borders upon the indifference which fosters indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. It may be safely said that it should not be a question of diet or kind of food, or teeth or even any of the reflexes which are supposed to have their influence in deranging the stomach. It is simply a matter of supplying the stomach, and digestive organs with those known assistants such as pepsin, and hydrochloric acid, both of which have a direct and powerful action upon the contents of the stomach.

One grain of a single ingredient in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, will digest 3,000 grains of food. This saves your stomach and gives it the rest it needs. All muscles require occasional rest if they are ever overtaxed. The stomach is no exception to this rule.

Try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will wonder how you ever got along without them. They are sold at 50 cents by all druggists everywhere.

EVELYN THAW'S BROTHER STRIKES IT RICH

Howard Nesbit, the young brother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the young artist's model who acquired international notoriety when her millionaire husband, Harry Thaw, murdered Stanford White, who is reported to have made a lucky strike, while prospecting in Alaska. Young Nesbit figured in the trial of Harry Thaw, and for a time was his sister's constant companion. He later started out to make a name for himself as a spender on the Great White Way, but suddenly decided to do something worth while and packed off for Alaska.

cal from the first district of Berlin by a majority of only nine out of a total vote of over 11,000. His Socialist opponent, Editor S. Duwell, demanded a recount, which reduced Dr. Kaempf's majority to six, but also showed sixteen cases of doubtful registration. The Reichstag Committee on elections decided to investigate these. As the German practice assumes that all illegal ballots were cast for the successful candidate, Dr. Kaempf anticipated an adverse report of the committee by resigning in order to stand again before Parliament reassembles. His Socialist opponent in the election, to be held November 5, will again be Editor Duwell, and as Col. Gaudke, the well-known military writer, will also run again on the Democratic ticket, a second ballot will almost certainly be required.

Dr. Kaempf was elected president in succession to the clerical leader, Dr. Martin Spahn, who resigned rather than sit with the Socialist vice-president Philipp Scheidemann. After an unsteady six week's tenure of office, made notable by Emperor William's refusal to receive Dr. Kaempf as president, a third election was held, at which Dr. Kaempf retained the presidency, but vice-president Scheidemann, whose half-forgotten epigram charging the Hohenzollerns with faithlessness to their pledged work proved his undoing, was forced out, to be succeeded by the National Liberal, Hermann S. Paasche.

The typical pipe of the German is passing out and giving place to the cigarette in spite of the devotion of the older Germans to their pipes or penny cigars.

Statistics just published show that the number of cigarettes consumed has increased more than tenfold since 1897, when the billion mark was passed, the figures being for 1907, 7,820,000,000; for 1908, 8,595,000,000; for 1909, 5,508,000,000; for 1910, 11,071,000,000 and for 1911, 12,403,000,000. These figures include the stamped hulls used by persons who prefer to make their own cigarettes but who are not allowed to escape the cigarette tax and they show that the consumption has almost doubled in the last five years. Assuming twenty million adult male smokers in Germany, this gives an average consumption per smoker of 620 cigarettes a year. The great bulk of these are cigarettes of the cheapest sort, 2 1/2 per cent. of those sold in 1911 retelling at 1 1/2 pfennig (three for a cent) or under and 55.7 per cent. falling in the next grade, retelling up to 2 1/2 pfennigs apiece. All in all, the German smoker, it is estimated, burns up

The expropriation of Polish landowners in the Eastern provinces of Prussia under the law passed four years ago has finally begun, the government making a modest start with proceedings to dispossess the Polish owners of four estates having a total of 5,200 acres, on which Germans will be settled.

The delay in applying the law has been sharply criticized by the German ultra-patriots, whose indignation against the government and the Poles has been fed by the fact that for several years more land has passed from German to Polish hands than conversely in the eastern provinces in spite of the expenditure of millions of government money every year in buying estates there and settling Germans upon them.

The government, however, hesitated to revive the Polish question in so violent a form as will result from the present step.

The law limits the government to a total expropriation of about 161,000 acres, the design being to have only such Polish estates taken as are needed for rounding out German settlements or connecting one settlement with another.

At the same time it is announced that Emperor William has sanctioned the introduction at the forthcoming session of the Prussian Parliament of a new bill dealing with the expropriated lands, providing that all lands so taken shall be divided into small holdings and assigned to German peasants. The measure is designed to allay the fears expressed that the expropriated lands would pass in bulk into the hands of the great Prussian landowners instead of to the needy German colonists; in fact, it has been demanded by a section of the Conservative party that in dividing up Polish estates certain large sections should be reserved for sale to wealthy farmers, who might become political leaders of the newly settled German peasants and stimulate their German race feeling.

"My Favorite Love Scene." I find it a matter of very great difficulty to select one particular love-scene as my favorite, writes Ellen Terry in the November Strand. I can at least say, however, that I have ever felt the deepest affection and admiration for the passage in "Romeo and Juliet" in which Juliet makes apology for her maiden boldness.

My reason for selecting this particular passage is that it serves to show to the full the perfect refinement and delicacy of Shakespeare's conception of the female character.

In this passage—and, indeed, in all the rest—Juliet's heart, fluttering between joy, hope, and fear, seems to regulate her speech in so beautiful a manner that the thought instinctively crosses one's mind that here, at least, the feelings of youth and of the spring are blended together like the breath of opening flowers.

The Odor He Missed.

A good illustration of the wit of Bishop Welton, the popular Dean of Manchester, is afforded by the following story. Once at a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor of Manchester, the Dean sat next to Sir Herbert Tree.

"Well, Mr. Tree, what have you been doing to-day?" he asked.

"I went for a long motor-ride this morning and lost a bet," replied the famous actor.

"Indeed," said the Dean. "And may I ask what the bet was?"

"I made a bet that we would pass through four hundred different odors and we only encountered three hundred and ninety-nine."

"Ah," replied Bishop Welton, promptly, "you missed the odor of sanctity."—From the November Strand.
